

Beyond Crisis: The Series

What started as an idea to share and celebrate the work across the globe around resilience building, has quickly developed into an exciting collaboration between community organisations, innovators, academia, the corporate sector and the ancient wisdom of our First Nations people. Experts are now coming together with a wealth of resources from a diverse array of professionals in the fields of environmental policy, impact investment, sustainable technology, historical analysis and more.

A frequently asked question is "What will it look like after COVID, ie beyond crisis?" This needs to be critically analysed and discussed. However, so much work is already being done create positive systems change. What we are already seeing is extensive collaboration, innovation and pooling of resources across sectors, engaging people from all backgrounds and walks of life. The COVID crisis has brought people together through a common adversary no matter who you are; parents, carers, communities and businesses, along with the many enterprises, groups and networks working around the clock to create a positive and resilient world "beyond crisis".

This event is not one but a series of webinars over 5 days from 17-21 August 2020, focused on analysing what is happening, understanding the huge challenges we are facing and sharing practical steps to creating resilient, vibrant communities and local economies "Beyond Crisis".

Beyond Crisis: The Series is online from Monday 17th to Friday 21st August, using Zoom Conferencing Technology. The team of collaborating organizations includes - Australian Earth Laws Alliance, The Valley Centre, Future Dreaming, Pingala and the New Economy Network Australia - along with FireSticks Alliance, W Dusk Energy, Future Super, International Bateson Institute, DICE Australia, Australian Energy Foundation, Brighte Capital, Indigenous Energy Australia, Environmental Resource Management, Atrium Ideas, 1 Million Women, ACOSS, Earth Sciences, IR20.
